"Finding new production partners is a treasure hunt that Alice is happy to undertake – especially me, that producers are reopening once-dormant facilities, and reciving near-forgotten skills. "Anything that we can make beautifully in the UK, we should make here," she says. "If we could make everything in England, we could.... This work is coming back, and we're thrilled to be a part of it."

Bringing production back to the UK enhances the 360-degree Britishness of these 'temperley' items. The Cloe is a timeless tailored three-piece suit cut from the finest Italian velvet. Its immaculately tailored waistcoat, jacket and wide-leg trousers are infused with Scoring London's 'scoring'. And the Paloma, a capsule collection including two dresses and tailored separates for a modern take on suiting, trails the heady promise of that most British of traditions: a gateway to summer dining.

METHOD BEHIND THE MADNESS: THE PALMAE PRINT

Alice takes us on a journey through Seventies art and film.

With its lush fronds and boogie styling, the Palmae design story evokes heady evenings chilled away amid palm trees and desert oases. The print at the heart of the story epitomises Alice's talent for weaving disparate references together into new designs.

To create it, Alice looked at the work of Miriam Schapiro, the pioneering feminist artist the '60s Decorativeness movement and Death on the Nile – fusing them to achieve a fresh, contemporary result.

Abstracts & Graphics

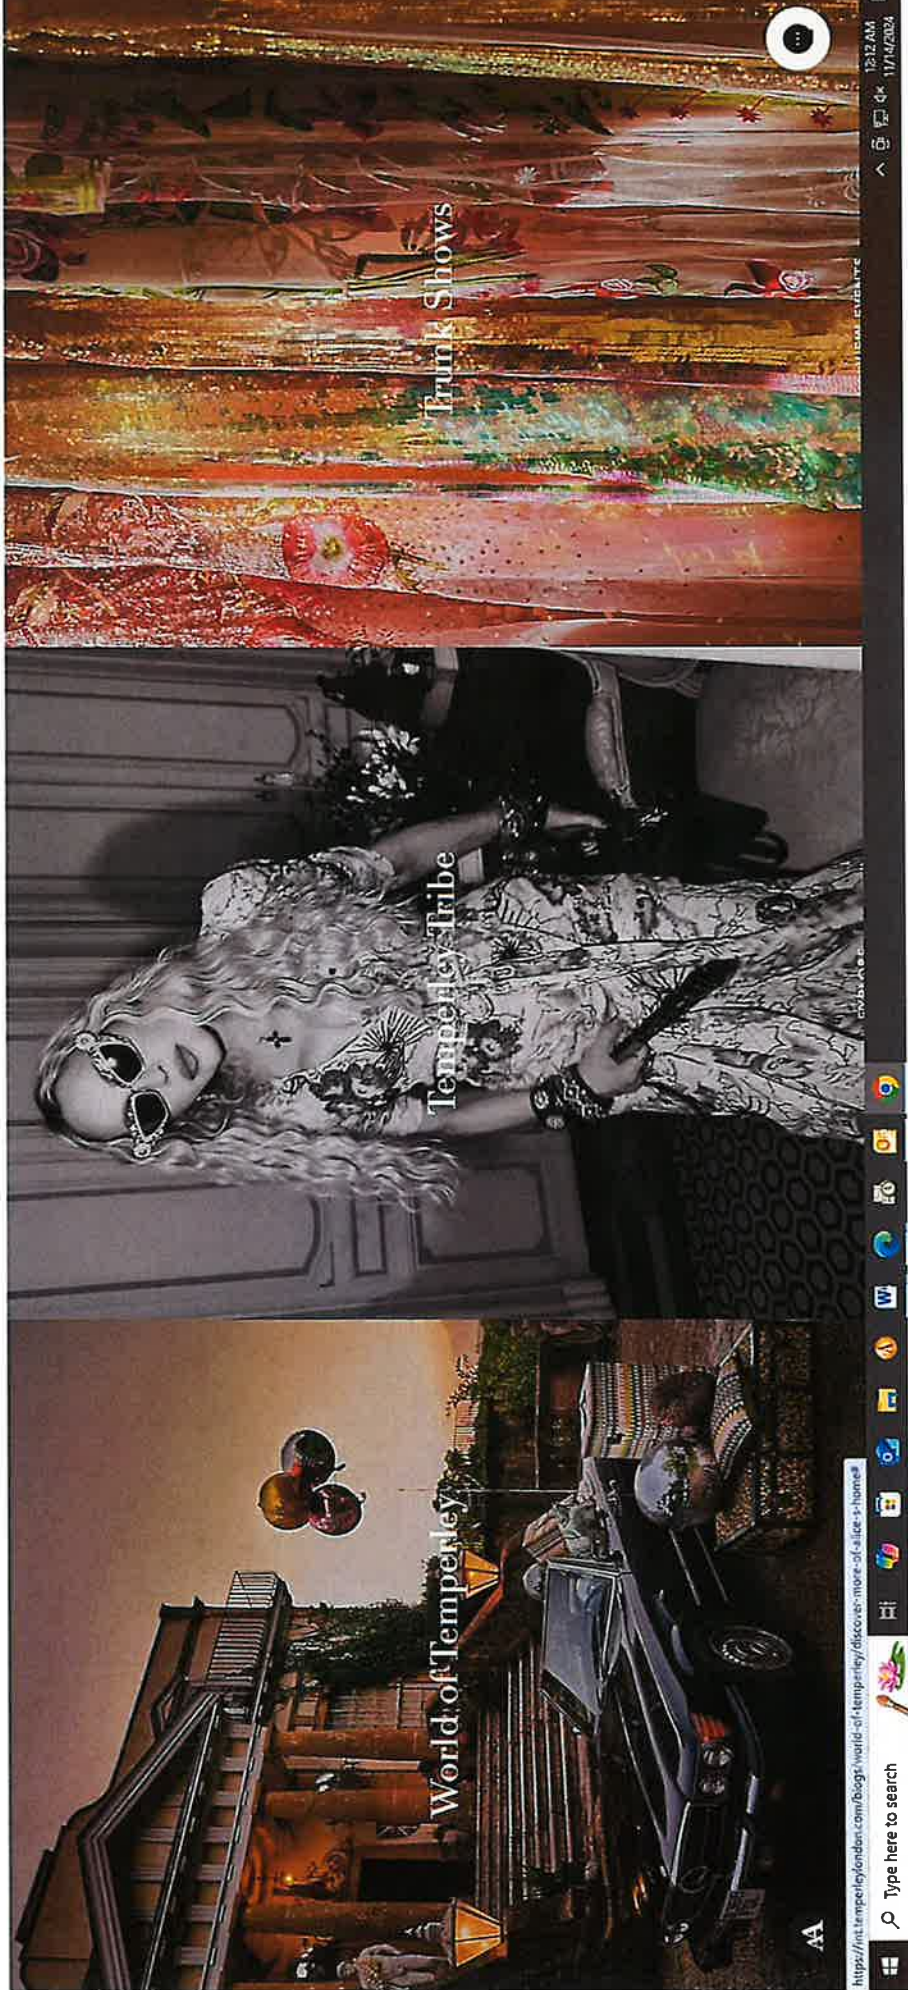

The Temperley London x Romo collection is a utopia of dreamlike prints that capture the senses.

"All the elements in the prints are hand-painted - so much time, love and passion has gone into each and every one. They really are pieces of art in their own right. Romo has transitioned these designs seamlessly from the sphere of fashion into the world of interiors." - Alice Temperley MBE

The Loping leopards of the Delilah print and mischievous, swinging monkeys of the Euphoria to the agile inspired swirls of the Fantaala and art-deco inspired stylised palm fronds of the Farrah come in a decadent range of printed cottons, deep pile velvets and embroidered cotton satins.
